ABSTRACT

This student workbook is designed to help Micronesian adults learn everyday English. Its ten chapters move from simple one-word picture labeling to more abstract ideas in a spiraled fashion, reiterating the essential elements of the English language in different, more complicated ways. Subjects covered include names for everyday objects and places: colors and numbers: names for emotions and physical characteristics: daily activities such as talking, watching television, reading, writing, and telephoning: transporation: telling time: work: clothes: food: shopping: money: parts of the body: and doctors and dentists. All exercises are illustrated with drawings or photographs of Micronesians: occasionally the Micronesians are shown interacting with Americans. Both written and conversational exercises are contained in the workbook. Written exercises include fill-in-the-blanks, compositions, multiple choice, and crossword puzzles. Conversational exercises focus on practical life situations such as cashing a check, shopping at a grocery store, and taking English classes. (KC)

Some things are easier to measure or count than others.
For example:

three bananas are easy to count,

but how do you count COFFEE?,
how do you count SUGAR?,
how do you count BUTTER?,
how do you count BREAD?.

This type of food has to be measured, for example we say:

a cup of coffee or a pot of coffee
a cup of sugar or a bag of sugar or a pound of sugar
a stick of butter or a pound of butter
a piece of bread or a loaf of bread

If we can't say how much at all, then we use "SOME", for example:

some coffee
some sugar
some bread
some butter

This is true for many things besides food. Here is a list, please mark C if you can count them in parts and mark N if you can't.

Dear Pen Pal,

Let me tell you about my experience in the emergency room. Last night, at eleven o'clock, I was sitting on the floor, watching TV. All of a sudden, I felt a sharp pain in my leg. I looked down, and saw that a poisonous spider had bitten me. I was very scared. I called my friend, and he took me to the emergency room. At the emergency room, a doctor looked at me, gave me some medicine, and told me to go home and go to bed. I was home in about two hours. I didn't like going to the emergency room, but I was glad I could go someplace if I needed help. I hope you never have to go to an emergency room, but if you do, I hope you are close to one.

SHOPPING IN A MARKET

Clerk: Hello, can I help you?

Woman: Hello. Yes, I want to buy some soap and some coffee.

Clerk: Here you are.

Woman: Oh, I'd also like some bananas.

Clerk: Anything else?

Woman: Oh, I don't think so.

Man: Yes, you said you wanted some potatoes.

Woman: Oh, yes, I want five potatoes.

Clerk: Is that all?

Woman: Yes, thanks. How much is it, all together?

Clerk: Well, soap costs 34 cents, coffee costs one dollar, 29 cents, bananas are 47 cents a pound, and potatoes are 53 cents a piece. So altogether it comes to four dollars and 75 cents.

Woman: Here it is, thank you.

Clerk: Goodby.
